Fraud, waste, and abuse (FWA) are terms frequently used in healthcare compliance to describe improper practices that result in unnecessary costs or legal violations. Each term has a distinct meaning that is important to distinguish for regulatory and educational purposes.

Definition of Fraud

Fraud involves intentional deception or misrepresentation made by a person or entity with the knowledge that the deception could result in unauthorized benefits. In healthcare, this often includes submitting false claims for payment, falsifying records, or providing services that were never rendered. Fraudulent actions are deliberate and punishable by law.

Definition of Waste

Waste refers to the careless or inefficient use of healthcare resources, leading to unnecessary costs. Unlike fraud, waste does not involve intentional wrongdoing but results from poor management or practices that could be avoided. Examples include overusing services or ordering unnecessary tests that do not improve patient care.

Definition of Abuse

Abuse involves practices that are inconsistent with accepted medical or business standards, potentially resulting in unnecessary costs or improper payment.
