- Theological Foundations of the Rules

Membership and Entry Requirements

The world mission society church of god rules begin with specific criteria for membership, designed to ensure that prospective members are committed to the church's beliefs and lifestyle. These entry requirements emphasize faith in God the Father and God the Mother, adherence to biblical teachings, and a willingness to participate actively in church activities. New members typically undergo a period of instruction and baptism, which serves as a formal acceptance into the community.

Faith Declaration and Baptism

Prospective members are required to declare their faith in both God the Father and God the Mother, a distinctive belief within the church. Baptism is considered essential, symbolizing purification and the start of a new spiritual life. The world mission society church of god rules mandate that baptism be performed only after a clear understanding of the church's doctrines, ensuring that members fully embrace the faith they profess.

Ongoing Commitment

After baptism, members are expected to maintain their commitment by attending regular worship services and participating in church events. The rules also encourage members to study the Bible diligently and apply its teachings in everyday life. The church provides various programs to support spiritual growth and reinforce adherence to its principles.

Worship and Religious Practices

The world mission society church of god rules prescribe specific worship formats and religious practices that reflect the church's unique theology and communal values. Worship services are structured to foster a collective spirit and deepen the members' relationship with God. These practices include regular Sabbath observance, annual festivals, and prayer meetings, all conducted in accordance with biblical precedents.

Sabbath Observance

One of the fundamental rules is the observance of the Sabbath on Saturday, which the church regards as a holy day dedicated to rest and worship. Members gather for communal services that include singing, scripture reading, and sermons focused on the teachings of the Bible and the church's doctrines. Observing the Sabbath is seen as a sign of faithfulness and obedience to God's commandments.

Annual Festivals and Holy Days

The church celebrates several annual festivals based on biblical instructions, such as the Passover, the Feast of Unleavened Bread, and the Feast of Tabernacles. The world mission society church of god rules require active participation in these events, which commemorate significant moments in salvation history and reinforce spiritual lessons. These festivals serve both religious and community-building purposes.

Prayer and Study Meetings

Regular prayer meetings and Bible study sessions are integral to the church's worship life. The rules encourage members to engage in communal and personal prayer, fostering a close connection with God. Study meetings provide a setting for education, discussion, and mutual encouragement, helping members internalize the teachings and apply them in their daily conduct.

Ethical and Moral Guidelines

The world mission society church of god rules outline a comprehensive set of ethical and moral standards that members are expected to uphold. These guidelines shape behavior within the church and in broader society, emphasizing purity, honesty, humility, and love. The rules are grounded in biblical commandments and the church's interpretation of Christian living.

Personal Conduct and Purity

Members are instructed to maintain a lifestyle of moral purity, which includes abstaining from behaviors considered sinful or harmful. The rules specifically address issues such as sexual morality, substance abuse, and respect for others. Upholding these standards is viewed as essential to maintaining the sanctity of the church community and honoring God.

Interpersonal Relationships

The church emphasizes love, forgiveness, and respect in interpersonal relationships. The world mission society church of god rules encourage members to resolve conflicts peacefully, avoid gossip, and support one another in times of need. These principles contribute to a harmonious community and exemplify the church's commitment to living according to Christ's example.

Stewardship and Responsibility

Members are also guided to demonstrate responsibility in their personal and professional lives. This includes honesty in business dealings, caring for the environment, and contributing to the welfare of society. The church teaches that ethical behavior extends beyond the congregation and reflects one's faith in everyday actions.

Community Service and Outreach

Community service and evangelism are significant components of the world mission society church of god rules, reflecting the church's mission to spread the gospel and serve humanity. Members are encouraged to engage actively in charitable activities, support missionary work, and share their faith with others.

Volunteerism and Charity

The church organizes various volunteer programs aimed at helping vulnerable populations, including the homeless, elderly, and disaster victims. The rules call for members to contribute time and resources generously, demonstrating practical love and compassion. These efforts also serve to enhance the church's reputation and witness in local communities.

Missionary Work and Evangelism

Evangelism is considered a core responsibility, with members participating in spreading the church's teachings locally and internationally. The world mission society church of god rules provide guidance on respectful and effective methods of outreach, emphasizing sincerity, sensitivity, and adherence to biblical truths. Missionary activities are coordinated through church headquarters and regional offices.

Community Engagement

Beyond direct service, the church encourages members to engage positively with their communities through cultural events, educational programs, and interfaith dialogue. These activities foster goodwill and create opportunities to share the church's message in a constructive manner.

Theological Foundations of the Rules

The world mission society church of god rules are deeply rooted in the church's unique theological framework, which shapes the interpretation of Scripture and the practical application of faith. Central to this theology is the belief in God the Mother alongside God the Father, the significance of the new covenant, and the role of obedience in salvation.

Belief in God the Mother and God the Father

The church teaches that God exists as both a Father and a Mother, a doctrine that influences many of its rules and practices. This duality emphasizes the nurturing and loving nature of God, encouraging members to cultivate a familial relationship with the divine. The rules reflect this theology by promoting unity, care, and reverence within the church community.

The New Covenant and Salvation

The world mission society church of god rules underscore the importance of the new covenant established through Jesus Christ and the Heavenly Mother. Observing the commandments and participating in church rituals are seen as vital expressions of faith that secure salvation. The rules provide a framework for living in accordance with this new covenant.

Obedience as a Spiritual Principle

Obedience to God's commandments and the church's guidelines is a recurring theme in the rules. This obedience is not merely ritualistic but is understood as an essential component of spiritual growth and relationship with God. The rules encourage members to internalize this principle, making it a foundation for all aspects of their religious life.
